Elected Deputy to Supreme Soviet of Russian S.F.S.R., from "Stalin" constituency of Moscow, 1947—. In 1934 Soviet Union joined League of Nations and began its "Popular Front" policy, adopting the principle of security against the thrust of "Fascist aggression." Outlined his dissatisfaction with the democracies in a speech, Mar. 10, 1939, and in Aug. 1939 a ten-year Russo-German non-aggression pact was concluded. In Sept. 1939 Russian troops occupied the eastern half of Poland, and together with Germany, Russia fixed the frontiers of Poland. On Sept. 28, 1939 a mutual assistance pact was signed with Estonia, giving the U.S.S.R. the right to establish air and naval bases in Estonia. On Oct. 5th a similar pact was signed with Latvia, and on Oct. 10th a pact was signed with Lithuania. Efforts were made to conclude a similar pact with Finland, but these failed. In Nov. 1939 Russia renounced the mutual non-aggression pact which it had with Finland since 1932 and hostilities between Soviet and Finnish troops commenced, resulting in a Russian victory. In 1941 Germany invaded Soviet territory and Russia joined Great Britain and later the United States in warring upon Axis powers until defeat of Germany and Japan in 1945.
